

Abstract

A process of providing a hydrophobic property to the surface of a plate, and a process of providing a hydrophilic property to the surface by irradiating energy light (radiation) on the surface of the plate, which is provided with the hydrophobic property are provided. Variations in the accumulated illumination intensity of radiation on the surface of the plate are controlled to 20% or less.